Scout your Team

Scout your team

Know your strengths and weaknesses

Before you can prepare for an opponent you must know your team. If your opponent knows your team better than you do, you will always be reacting and playing from behind.

- Analyse shooter tendencies
- Analyse efficiency in each offensive formation
- Analyse how effective the defense was at running a gameplan

Analyse shooter tendencies

Everyone has habits

Where do your shooters shoot from different positions. Everyone has tendencies. Your opponents will scout your shooters' tendencies. It is your job to help identify these tendencies before competition so your players can work on improving shooting percentages.

- In flights vs spin shots
- Shootouts

Scout your Opponent

Scout your opponent

Know their strengths and weaknesses

Now that you have seen your own strengths and weaknesses, now find the strengths and weaknesses for your potential opponents.

- Analyse offensive formations – know preferences depending on substitution side
- Analyse preferred defensive formations – how aggressive do they play, how do they block to help the goalie
- Analyse shootouts – do goalies come out or do they prefer to keep a goalie back

Develop your Gameplan

Gameplan

Know yourself and know your opponent

Defensively

- Identify the top 3 things an opponent offence does well – gameplan to stop their top options, make them beat you with their 2nd, 3rd or 4th option

Defensive Gameplan

Team A: prefers left wing specialist

Example gameplan:

- Top 3 offensive options
 1. Right wing spin shots
 2. Left wing specialist
 3. Pivot in-flight

Gameplan

1. Take away right wing shot
2. Help off the centre back and make pass to specialist difficult

Practice

Practice, practice, practice

Develop discipline

Talking and planning on paper mean nothing if you cannot execute the gameplan on gameday. Develop your practice to simulate opponent's strengths.

Enjoy the journey

Don't worry about the destination

Practice must simulate aspects of the game. Practice is a safe space to make mistakes. You can only get better by making mistakes. Learn from each mistake.

Create an environment that is competitive. Simulate as best you can the pressure of playing against your potential opponents.

Practice until everyone on the team knows their specific role to implement the gameplan.
